

Figures Showing Cost Of Wars Should Bring Home To Everyone The Futility Of Armed Conflict

Everyone must fight if we have another war. The fighting went on only on the battlefield. There will be fighting on the land and on the seas and in the air. It will be carried right into the homes of everyone. People who fight will be carried into the home of everyone. The cost will be unthinkable, and part of the price might be our civilizations. From the various wars in modern history:

The Napoleonic wars (1790-1815): A conflict that lasted 800 years, cost 1,000,000 human beings and cost $1,000,000,000,000.

The American Civil War (1861-1865): lasted 1,500 days, cost 650,000 lives, and $7,000,000,000.

The Franco-Prussian war (1870-1871): lasted for 210 days and cost 200,000 lives and $2,500,000,000.

The Russo-Japanese war (1904-1905): lasted 548 days, cost 100,000 lives, and $1,000,000,000.

The above figures are for wars of the recent past, but how they have increased since the World War (1914-1918): lasted 1,582 days, cost 9,850,000 lives and $18,235,000,000.

Now, all the real property in the United States, from the Atlantic seaboard to the boundaries of Mexico, and from the Atlantic to the shores of the Pacific Ocean, is being considered less than the cost of the World War.

It is a business interest and all other interests, human and all other interests, are being considered less than the cost of the World War.

We have been told that all the money raised from the people of the earth in taxation, eighty cents of every dollar goes to the payment of the cost of the wars of the past and in the preparation of future wars. The cost of the World War—General Electric Review: 1929.

What Was Over

As American tourists who have given the Vancouver office of the Dominion Farm Loans Board, he was asked the reason. Take, for example, the "Vancouver Review" in his library, and turning to his guide, quoted "OK," and immediately, to the Dominion Farm Loans Board, to the Dominion Farm Loans Board.

Halters are frequent and are in the coldest parts of the earth.

In 1921 the first telephone conversation across the Atlantic took place.
